Interesting Facts for the Week

It's hard to say which blood type is the rarest in the world, since they're linked to genetics. That means the prevalence of certain blood types varies widely in different parts of the world. However, in the United States, AB-negative is considered to be the rarest blood type, and O-positive the most common. The Stanford School of Medicine Blood Center ranks blood types in the United States from rarest to most common as follows:

AB-negative (.6 percent), B-negative (1.5 percent), AB-positive (3.4 percent), A-negative (6.3 percent), O-negative (6.6 percent), B-positive (8.5 percent), A-positive (35.7 percent), O-positive (37.4 percent).

Known as the Kola Superdeep Borehole, the deepest hole ever dug reaches approximately 7.5 miles below the Earth's surface (or 12,262 kilometers), a depth that took about 20 years to reach. The Kola Superdeep Borehole is the result of a scientific drilling project of the Soviet Union in the Pechengsky District, near the Russian border with Norway, on the Kola Peninsula. The project attempted to drill as deep as possible into the Earth's crust. With a depth of 40,230 feet, it has been, since 1989, the deepest artificial point on Earth.
